6.0 GENERAL

Supplier relationship management consists of 6 steps (Preferred Supplier relationship readiness, Supplier segmentation, internal demand management, Market management, Supplier development, and Supplier performance management) as detailed below.

Procurement will work with the Stakeholder to establish a solid SRM foundation during the sourcing process by executing the following:

6.1 Preferred Supplier Relationship Readiness

- 6.1.1 The sourcing process must include a well defined scope, expectations, and roles and responsibilities for both the Supplier and Sepracor. These should be directly translated into the Contract.
- 6.1.2 Establish clear, measurable Service Level Agreements (SLAs) and Key Performance Indicators (KPIs) with explicit targets should be included upfront if applicable during the sourcing, negotiation and Contract execution process.
  - Performance measurements will vary depending on the product/service, customer satisfaction, product/ service quality, support process performance, end-user satisfaction, efficiency, Supplier performance, and/or measurement methods.
  - There should be a clear link between a Suppliers performance and their compensation, and what constitutes a failure and penalty.
- 6.1.3 Where applicable Procurement advises using a price/cost model with at-risk fees. Use of outcomes based language, holdback language, and penalty/reward clause can help share the risk and reward of the relationship.
- 6.1.4 Where applicable executes a formal transfer process with the Supplier with a detailed transfer plan (process, knowledge, software, inventory,data).
- 6.1.5 Clearly defined roles and responsibilities must be included both during the sourcing process and in the Contract.

6.2 Supplier Segmentation

- 6.2.1 Procurement will perform Supplier segmentation to understand the current state, identify gaps, define the ideal state, allocate resources and identify appropriate actions
- 6.2.2 Align segmentation with sourcing strategies.

- Conduct specification rationalization.
- Manage what can be purchased through use of Preferred Suppliers, product standards and catalogues.
- Create process rules for purchases.
- Create commodity rules (i.e. Travel Guide).

6.3.2 Stakeholder should provide Supplier with accurate forecasts

- Communicate forecasted demand to Suppliers.
- Analyze discrepancies between actual and forecast to improve the linkages between the Supplier's processes and ours.

6.3.3 Stakeholder evaluates Supplier standard offerings and order timing where appropriate.

6.3.4 Procurement will evaluate complementary services to obtain insight into opportunities to leverage spend, by combining multiple services; or eliminating services, or goods. Investigate /identify process improvements to reduce costs.

6.3.5 Procurement rationalizes the Supplier base.

6.3.6 Procurement restricts sourcing to preferred Suppliers only, permitting deviation due to capability and performance gaps.

6.3.7 Stakeholder will track accuracy and trend historical usage data.

6.4 Market Management

6.4.1 Stakeholder works with Procurement to understand the marketplace by periodically analyzing:

- Key industry statistics
- Market dynamics

6.5.2 Create pre-defined “tracks” for development, including guidelines for development trigger identification, toolkits for simplified execution of development activities and program management toolkits.

6.6 Supplier Performance Management

- 6.6.1 Procurement partners with Stakeholders to:
- 6.6.2 Establish a formal benchmarking process. This can be accomplished either through a procurement led business review or through a Supplier self reporting of established KPIs.
- 6.6.3 Ensure the Supplier performance assessment is open and collaborative internally as well as with the Supplier.
- 6.6.4 Track the Supplier relationship status using a Supplier scorecard system showing a Suppliers performance to their peer group and across all Preferred Suppliers.
- 6.6.5 Establish a performance review schedule with performance metrics and targets.
